great pleasure of seeing many of our members here for our Rupert's Land Colloquium 2002. It was wonderful to see all the familiar faces here, and also to welcome many who have not previously joined in these events. Our travels have caused this spring Newsletter to appear a bit later than usual; I shall be back in Winnipeg when you read this in May.

Colloquium 2002: "From Rupert's Land to Oxford" took place at Mansfield College, the University of Oxford, April 9-12. About 70 registrants, 30 or so from North America and the rest from the UK, gathered to participate in a rich and varied program. To make any trip to the factory, the blanket factory (founded 1669) in Witney, just outside Oxford, where all the Hudson's Bay Company's blankets (and many others) have been made over the years.

for making possible this remarkable occasion! We owe thanks also to the Museum welcome from Dr. Michael O'Hanlon, the Director. The Pitt Rivers is a remarkable Victorian Gothic building crammed with collections from all over the world; we gathered and conversed among the crowded display cases that fill
