

AL 111 1

images of legends once thought to be of our wide-ranging heritage of canoe to Michèle Allard, Director and of the Red Lake Regional

Historical Society and

Norval Morrisseau Thunderbird, Red Lake Regional

New in Print

Carol James, Fingerweaving Unleashed

Bring Carol James' fun to you as a guide to a wide range of fingerweaving sashes, with detailed annotated illustrations and photographs showing patterns and techniques. In addition to providing tips on finding the right yarn and tools, this book is relevant for beginners and experts alike.

AND COMMON MISTAKES

FiberArts; Winnipeg, 2008, 64 pp., paperback, $10.05

CAROL JAMES

Passing of Lloyd Keith

Harry Duckworth

H. Lloyd Keith, who passed away after a nine-year battle with cancer on November 9, had many friends who were reminded of this by the speed with which the news of his death traveled. Many people forwarded e-mails.

Lloyd taught Canadian history at Shoreline Community College, in Seattle, until ill health forced his retirement. He was a meticulous and persistent scholar of the fur trade of western Canada and the American Northwest. He wrote many articles, and completed one great book, North of Athabasca. Slave Lake and Mackenzie River Documents of the North West Company, 1800-1821 (McGill-Queen's University Press, 2004), in which he gathered together all the known journals and fragments of journals relating to the NWCo on a regular basis. He was the first to provide information on the Northwest Territories at the dawn of their written history.

Lloyd's physical presence was that of a mountain man - tall and bearded (though he admitted with a chuckle that his manner was gentle, a bit formal, unfailingly considerate, and more modest than he should have been about his own

him, checking out the site of Rocky Mountain House last May, with John Jackson, before they started the drive home to

Lloyd Keith gave a substantial gift of research to the HBCA in 1994, which is now housed in the Hudson's Bay Company Archives under "H. Lloyd Keith fonds."

